In the long history of formal learning in the West, universities and schools constantly have faced the problem of blending the directives of ancient tradition with the functional requirements of their particular age. The unimpeachable standards of olden times exist side by side with contemporary ideas, the intricacy of a Gothic arch with the angularity of the Bauhaus School, philosophy and the classics with courses in physics and business administration.

This year's EVERGREEN spotlights what is contemporary at Loyola College. Extrinsically, this theme is found in the angular lines of the Andrew White Student Center. Intrinsically, it is experienced every day in the progressive outlook of Loyola's academic life. While safeguarding the traditions of Western learning, Loyola College never forgets the value of an education in touch with the realities of today's world.

Dedication

The contemporary theme of this year's annual is personified in the figure of Father James J. Conlin, S.J. Briefcase under arm, Father Conlin typifies the Jesuit of today, combining many roles for the cause of the apostolate. At Evergreen, Father Conlin is both priest and teacher, spiritual adviser and scholar; both souls and sociology are the separate objects of his interest. Moreover, there is still another role Father Conlin fills: the role of student working for his doctorate in the field of sociology. Like Jesuits everywhere in this jet age, Father Conlin takes to the airways to achieve his conversion from the role of teacher at Evergreen to the role of student in St. Louis. And wherever he travels, his gait is the assured stride of the modern man on the go.

Father Conlin is Philadelphia-born and bred. After his Freshman year at Villanova College, he entered the Society of Jesus at the Novitiate of St. Isaac Jogues in Wernersville, Pa. Today, he holds three degrees from St. Louis University: baccalaureate, master's, and licentiate in philosophy. Pursuing his theological studies at Woodstock College, he was ordained to the priesthood in 1953. Father Conlin taught the classics at Gonzaga High School in Washington, D.C., but since 1955 he has been on the faculty of Loyola College, teaching in both day and evening sessions. This past fall he was promoted to the rank of assistant professor of sociology.

St. Francis Xavier, the greatest of the Jesuit missionaries, was known as the Apostle of the Indies, because of his great work in that area; Father Conlin should be awarded the title "Apostle of the Book Store" for his great work in converting the denizens of that region. The ease of relationship which Father has inspired there while discussing the finer points of athletics has had far-reaching consequences.

If the value of a thing is truly proportioned to the effort expended in obtaining it, then Father's doctorate will be worth a great deal, for this past year he contracted pneumonia and dysentery in pursuing heavy schedules of teaching and studies half a continent apart.

Since his return to Loyola College after his long stay in a St. Louis hospital, his recuperative powers have matched the pace of his campus activities. The word "incapacitated" is not in the good padre's lexicon. With the roar of jets in his head, Father Conlin envisions the day in the not-too-distant future when once again he will assume his dual role as teacher-student, when once again his gait is the assured stride of the modern Jesuit on the go.

VERY REVEREND VINCENT F. BEATTY, S.J.
President Of The College

The President of the College is the chief administrative officer, responsible for the administration and supervision of all phases of the College operation. In particular, aided by advisory groups and executive assistants, he administers financial, budgetary, and legal operations; he supervises all educational programs and interprets educational policies; he represents the College at public affairs and at educational conferences; he maintains a development program; he provides for the preparation of reports on the status of the institution to its own official bodies and to external agencies.

JOSEPH K. DRANE, S.J.
Academic Vice-President

The Academic Vice-President endeavors to co-ordinate various phases of the College administrative organization. He arranges and conducts meetings of the Faculty and the Academic Council, and meetings of the five permanent Faculty Committees. With these groups he conducts a continuing self-evaluation for the College, and sees that the results of their efforts are given a suitable permanent form. In particular, it is his task to transmute the policies of the College into a readable and attractive catalog. He serves, besides, as an adviser to various officials of the College.

ALOYSIUS C. GALVIN, S.J.
Dean Of Studies

The task set before the Dean of Studies is to co-ordinate and direct the various educational processes so that the son whom Loyola bears is a mature and integrated personality who has not only discovered and experienced, but also cultivated and committed himself to, truth and goodness.

Although human nature is essentially unchanging, each human personality is unique, sacred, and inviolable; and, therefore, the task of forming it requires a prudent blending of the ancient and the new — a reliance on the heritage of the past combined with personal insight, freshness of view, and adaptability.

FRANK C. BOURBON, S.J.
Dean of Men

Among the many functions of the Dean of Men is his work as the liaison between the Administration and the student body. Besides supervising all College activities, the Dean of Men is responsible for the keeping of all attendance records, and for enforcement of the disciplinary regulations of the College. The Dean looks upon his work as Director of Student Personnel as his most important, and most enjoyable, assignment. All of his other assignments and responsibilities are subordinate to, and designed to contribute to, the perfect fulfillment of this task.

BIOLOGY

Research is the hidden inner force of a college or any of its departments, and the new psychopharmacology laboratory marks the initiation of this force in Loyola's department of biology. Although undergraduates see little of the research project itself, they benefit from the renewed interest of their professors in the pursuit of their science, and from the living examples of the work to be done in the field. The students' own acquaintance with laboratory work has also become more thorough as a result of the improvements in lighting, microscopes, and models which have been introduced for all courses.

BUSINESS

The department of accounting and business administration introduced this year a new option in business economics. The new field provides background training for many government and business positions and a firm base for graduate study. The more traditional curriculum also has incorporated revisions. There are additional requirements in science, mathematics, history, and modern languages, as well as more exacting standards in English literature and composition. Since this program consumes the bulk of the first two years, concentration in the major field does not begin until the Junior year.

The Chemistry Department at Loyola College is one of the more rapidly expanding segments of the school. For the science and pre-med students it offers an excellent background in a vital subject. For the student enrolled in nonscientific departments, the department provides that appreciative brush with scientific methodology necessary for a liberal-arts degree. With the growing interest in chemistry, additions have been made both in faculty members and in experimental equipment. Recent acquisitions in the laboratories have been an ultraviolet, as well as an infrared, spectrophotometer.

ENGLISH

The increasing need for more rigid requirements in English composition has caused the English Department to inaugurate several changes in its program for undergraduates. The first two semesters of the curriculum are now devoted to a course in prose fiction, which analyzes the mechanics of the short story and the novel.

The major concentration applies the basic precepts and examples of the first two years to a more total view of the history of English literature. Its focus ranges the field from the far-distant works of Chaucer up to the more contemporary American writers.

Three new instructors and a new chairman of the department have given the mathematics office quite a new look this year, but innovation has not been confused with novelty. The pattern of the department's activities is still basically the same sound program which Fr. Frederick Koehler introduced four years (and four department heads) ago. It was through the studies prescribed by this program that Loyola trained the first of its students to merit an honorable mention in the National Science Foundation Scholarship Examination. With continued efforts, more honors are expected in the future.

MILITARY SCIENCE

Sound defense policy requires far more well-educated officers than the service academies could possibly train, and the Reserve Officers' Training Program has long been the government's answer to its own need. The Cadet Corps at Loyola is characterized by an intensive introductory program, compulsory for all Freshmen and Sophomores, and a well-organized brace of advanced courses which annually attract 20 to 25 per cent of the Junior and Senior Classes. The most qualified cadets are awarded the title of Distinguished Military Student, and are given the opportunity to accept commissions in the Regular Army.

MODERN LANGUAGES

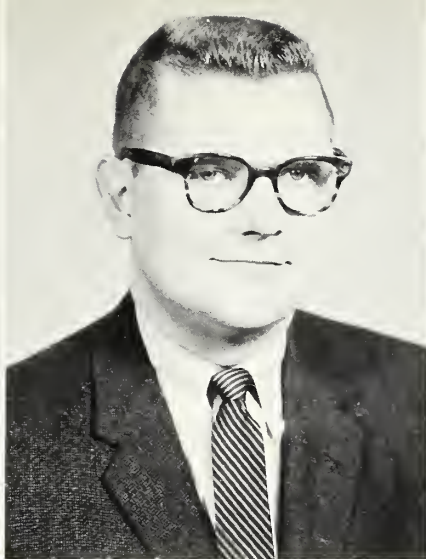

In order that the students of Loyola may apply for various fellowships and scholarships the Modern Language Department has increased its program. The school year 1959-1960 offered for the first time electives in advanced French and German. Next year, it will be possible to elect another language in Junior year. This will be elementary French, German, or Spanish. Intermediate courses will then be taken in Senior year in these same languages. In this way, the Modern Language Department offers the student the opportunity to learn the fundamentals of two languages before he graduates.

PHYSICS AND ENGINEERING

The outstanding characteristic of Loyola College is growth, and in no place is it more clearly evidenced than in the Physics Department. Under the direction of Dr. Gumnick, the department has expanded the engineering-physics option and generally improved the quality of the various courses.

In addition to performing its teaching duties, the staff has been engaged in a continuing struggle to keep the rate of expansion of the laboratory facilities equal to the growing needs of its blossoming program. These efforts are reaching fruition this year, as plans for a new science building are being drawn up.

PHILOSOPHY

Searching for the Philosopher's Stone is a pastime no longer indulged in, but philosophy itself is undeniably a subject of current interest at Loyola. The past year saw the advent of a new instructor and a renewed surge of student endeavor. The appetite for knowledge was whetted not only by the usual enticement of glamorous grades, but by the incentive of competition for medals awarded in public disputations. From first principles of thought to final goals of activity Loyolans all, whatever their field of concentration, made a steady, if laborious, progress, with a more unified education the result.

THEOLOGY

Theology is a paradox; it seems to be at once the richest and the poorest of all sciences. Its wealth lies in the importance of the truths with which it deals: the nature of God and His relation to man. Yet, one might argue that theology is the most impoverished science, for its source of development is dry: a fixed deposit of faith.

The objective body of truth, it must be admitted, is fixed and determined, but man's knowledge of it must ever grow in depth and extension. The theology professors of Loyola College are dedicated to this personal development in themselves and, with equal enthusiasm, in their students.

WILLIAM D. LYNN, S.J.
Instructor

Educating the whole man is a painstaking and prolonged process. The effort to impart the lustre of wisdom may effect no more than a gloss of virtue, and while centuries' toil has polished selected facets of the human personality ad unguem, there too easily remain hidden aspects which have completely missed schooling's abrasive touch. The agile tongue, well-honed wit, and soaring spirit cultivated by traditional disciplines may be pernicious as well as precious possessions for a man who lacks social context and cultural perspective. Not such sons does Loyola care to nurture.

STUDIES

Context and perspective are provided by liberal studies too often unrecognized as such. Sociology plunges the philosophically abstruse "social nature of man" into the practical turmoil which is its consequence, while history and political science trace the vagaries of the zoon politikon through ages of strife interminable and governmental systems all more or less anarchic. The tranquillity of origins pervades the Department of Ancient Classics, while man's expressive force is sublimated in fine arts. And last, there is a reflective glance at education itself, the dominant of one's minority.

ACTIVITIES

OF OUR LADY

Concentration is the order of the day as Rich Sniadach, Bob Eisenzopf, Frank Bien, James Sydnor, and John Casey view proceedings at a meeting of the Sodality.

"Let's do something about First Friday Mass attendance," says Joe Notarangelo.

Even though much of what it does remains "behind the scenes," still the Sodality remains one of the most important organizations on campus. Unhindered by its small membership, this cadre of spiritual "shock troops" has taken upon itself two important tasks in the past academic year. In union with several other liturgically interested campus activities, the Sodality has started on a graduated scale to achieve a complete missa recitata with full participation by the laity. Moreover, the Sodality has sponsored dances after home basketball games. These informal social affairs encourage more people to come out to the games and thereby arouse more general student interest in the affairs of the College. The Sodality continues to do its admirable social apostolate at St. Joseph's Hospital. The prefect for the Sodality for the year 1959-1960 was Ron Sacker; the moderator, Father Knott.

Fr. Knott, Rich Sniadach, and Jim Sydnor end an Executive Council discussion concerning the progress of candidates.

St. John Berchmans Society members, l. to r., Tom Murn, Mike Plott, Mick Pelczar, Jim Molloy, Frank Detorie, and Joe France pause after a meeting.

Frank Detorie and Jim Molloy check the Mass Servers' schedule for their appointments in the coming weeks.

BERCHMANS SOCIETY

This year the St. John Berchmans Society has increased its membership and launched several new projects. Co-operating with the Sodality's missa recitata program, the "altar-boys" have learned not to wince when the congregation mangles the Latin responses, and they have acted as readers of the epistle and gospel for the new liturgical arrangement. In addition, several classes have been formed to instruct those interested in learning how to serve Mass. This year's President was one of the avid students. Of course, the Society continues to provide servers for the 7:30, 8:00, and noon Masses, as well as for special liturgical functions.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The President of the Student Council, Tom Dwyer, officiates at one of the Friday morning meetings in Xavier Lounge. The members and Faculty Adviser show great interest as Tom delivers his mid-semester "state of the council" report. Very favorable, the report stressed the many constructive actions of the council, particularly the proposal regarding school-wide purchase of the yearbook and the passage of the free course bill, which allowed qualified students to take additional courses at no extra charge.

Council members gather for luncheon and discussion with the president of the College, Father Beatty.

The Executive Committee, l. to r.: Cawthorne, Keene, L. Rose, Dwyer, Cullen, Metzbower. These men map out the pattern of council activity to assure smooth and efficient meetings.

Loyola student activity reaches its fever peak at ten o'clock on Friday mornings. At that time the president of the student body calls to order meetings of the Student Council. Last year the gavel was swung with conviction by Tom Dwyer, whose persuasive voice found resonant contradiction, soft admonition, and enthusiastic approval among its unpredictable echoes from all parts of the council chamber.

Reluctant to fritter away an entire summer, the council convened in August to consider proposals concerning the yearbook and the new student center. With extraordinary verve it exercised its advisory powers by recommending to the Administration what it considered an apt distribution of office space among the various activities, and a workable plan for the financing of the EVERGREEN ANNUAL. In these two actions it set the pattern of its year's work — the co-ordination of student activities, and the representation of student fears, hopes, and aspirations to the consideration of Faculty and Administration.

Of prime concern to the 1959-1960 council was the repeated allegation that Loyola students were deficient in that indefinable known as "school spirit." Committees were appointed to determine the extent and entrenchment of the apathy, and a series of student assemblies and rallies was inaugurated to counteract its effects. The fruits of all the council's actions can only be gathered fully by the underclasses.

N.F.C.C.S.-N.S.A.

The National Student Association and the National Federation of Catholic College Students are both duly represented at Loyola. These organizations work through the Student Council and the cocurricular activities to keep Evergreen students informed as to the needs and doings of college students the world over.

Loyola's delegate to the N.S.A. is Dick Prodey; his alternate is Bill Lampieri. Loyola has the capable representation of delegate Bob Goldsmith and his alternate John Baynes to the N.F.C.C.S.

John Baynes, Bob Goldsmith, and Dick Prodey compare notes on their respective reports.

ACADEMY

In this modern age, when man's attention is directed to his future conquests in space, one should pause and look back at those ancient civilizations that got along considerably well without rockets, H-bombs, and similar gadgets. To encourage such a reflective glance at the Greek and Roman cultures is the objective of the Classics Academy. All its members do not pretend to be Latin scholars, but they find that learning about the customs of classical antiquity can be quite fascinating. In the past they have undertaken many intellectual excursions through such pleasant groves as Greek drama, Latin poetry, and classical mythology. Through their study, they have become convinced that man's way of thinking is essentially the same now as it was two thousand years ago.

Members gather around the moderator at his home to study a discovery of Mick Pelczar's.

Officers of the Classics Academy, Joe Notarangelo, president, and Ted Bauer, vice-president, with the moderator Dr. Kaltenbach.

H Σ Φ

Eta Sigma Phi is a national honorary fraternity whose membership is restricted to those interested in the classics. In close co-operation with the Classics Academy and under the capable moderation of Dr. Kaltenbach, Loyola's Beta Chi chapter offers many opportunities whereby students may foster their interest in, and increase their knowledge of, the classical writings of antiquity. On a variety of topics, ranging from the Aeneid of Virgil to the mythology of Greece, the members of Eta Sigma Phi prepared and delivered papers revelatory of the customs and personalities of the Greek and Roman eras.

Eta Sigma Phi honors are held by Mick Pelczar, Ted Bauer, Mike Plott, and Joe Notarangelo, all members of the Senior Class.

I.R.C.

Colonel Kadick, PMST, gives I.R.C. members proof that he is scholar as well as soldier.

Problems and policies of the newly emerging Afro-Asian countries attracted the rapt attention of last year's International Relations Club. To acquaint its members with the mentality of these peoples, the I.R.C. arranged for several visits to the African and Asian embassies in Washington, where interviews with diplomatic personnel were arranged. A further result of these visits was the coming to Loyola of speakers from several of the countries whose problems are most turbulent. These talks were a welcome addition to the program of lectures sponsored on the Evergreen campus each year.

The general purpose of the I.R.C. is not merely to make its members aware of what is happening in the world today, but to foster an understanding of international affairs consonant with the responsibility for their future conduct which falls upon the college population of the present. Realizing the critical position of the United Nations in the pattern of world politics, the I.R.C. cultivates the interest of its members in this organization. Loyola's club was instrumental in reorganizing the Maryland chapter of the Collegiate Council of the U.N., and participated in the model assembly at Albany.

I.R.C. lectures are stimulating, and so is the coffee they serve during the discussions.

World tensions seem not to have gripped moderator Dr. Varga (second from left) or I.R.C. members Nelka, Weigand, or Rose.

President Chuck Weigand collects his mail. Communications may come from as near as Washington or as far away as Nairobi or Bangkok.

New Music Club headquarters are more conducive to relaxation than this tense moment would indicate.

In refutation of accusations that they are orthogonal equilateral figures, the members of the Music Club point to their room in the Andrew White Center. Acoustically designed, the room lacks any parallel surfaces. The organization thus boasts something unusual besides its members.

Pied-piping the group through its progressive year was Fred Koenig. Fiddling around with the knobs and records, Vice-President Jim Molloy, Secretary Robert Brooks, and Librarian Al Wieber tried to keep things cool.

The club was fortunate this year in finding a patron, Mr. S. L. Hammerman, who agreed to furnish the new chamber. Conducting the whole ensemble for the administration was Mr. Voci.

MUSIC CLUB

Fred Koenig asks Jim Molloy if he thinks Frank Detorie would enjoy "Night Train."

To mark the one hundredth anniversary of the firing on Fort Sumter, the John Gilmary Shea History Academy selected the Civil War as its topic for discussion during the school year 1959-1960. Many little-known and fascinating aspects of the great American struggle were explored by the thirty members of the academy. Trips were taken to the Maryland Historical Society, Harpers Ferry, and the Antietam battleground. Each monthly meeting occasioned an informal talk concerning the general topic by one of the members, and a very informal repast and discussion period followed the talk. Occasionally, the academy sponsored formal addresses on campus by such prominent figures as Francis X. Gallagher. This year's moderator was Mr. Mair; the president was Lou Rose.

HISTORY ACADEMY

Members play host to the History Academy, so that serious work takes on an air of casual chatter.

Rose and Cawthorne show mixed reactions to a message from their moderator's desk.

CHEMISTRY CLUB

Alchemy would be required to turn this group into chemists, but the magic takes place at their regular meetings, where lab coats work wonders for appearance, and scientific zeal transmutes expressions.

Titration and distillation are not the essence of chemistry, as members of the Chemists' Club are well aware. Their constant endeavor to delve beneath the undergraduate's acquaintance with the elementary tools of the subject has gained for them a more profound insight into the connection between experimentation and the advancement of chemical science.

Directed efficiently in its activities by its president, Paul Kreiner, this year's club sponsored several lectures delivered by distinguished visiting chemists. Setting an example for the club members to follow, these men spoke with an authority gained from research in their respective chemical fields. The enthusiasm of the members led to several research papers delivered by the students themselves.

Joe Sanda instructs Paul Kreiner and Joe Piechocki in the blending of malt and hops.

MANAGEMENT CLUB

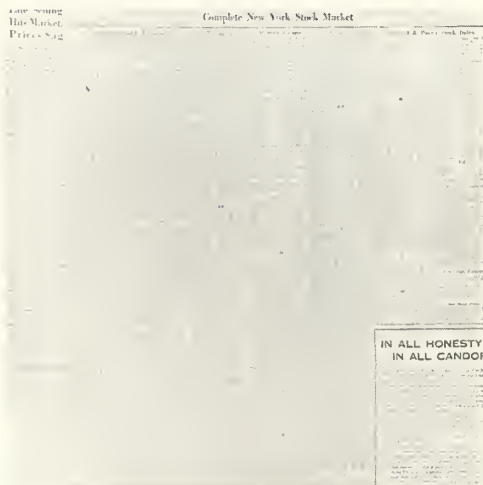

"Casey" said, "Stop me if you've heard this one"; and Dr. Boyle said, "Now, please; I've heard it."

One of the more recent cocurricular activities on the campus, the Management Club has had to surmount many obstacles in order to become established and to be recognized by the students and faculty.

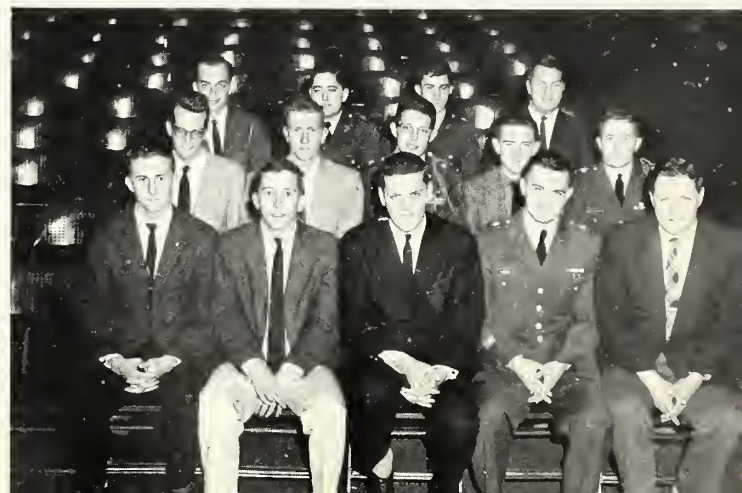

Several important events during the past two years have made this task easier and have created the impression that the Management Club may be here to stay. A formal constitution and a set of by-laws were drafted, and several newly added faculty members were instrumental in stirring up interest in the club and its objectives.

The officers for the current academic year were Robert Magaha, president; Thomas Gorsuch, vice-president; and Richard Sandaal, secretary-treasurer. The faculty moderator was Dr. Boyle.

In keeping with the tenor of the club's stated aims, many interesting lectures and tours were provided for the education and entertainment of the members, including a lecture by Mr. Daniel Loden, vice-president of Van Sant-Dugdale Advertising Agency.

The Management Club with its president, Robert Magaha (front, center). Magaha was the first to hold office under the club's newly drafted constitution.

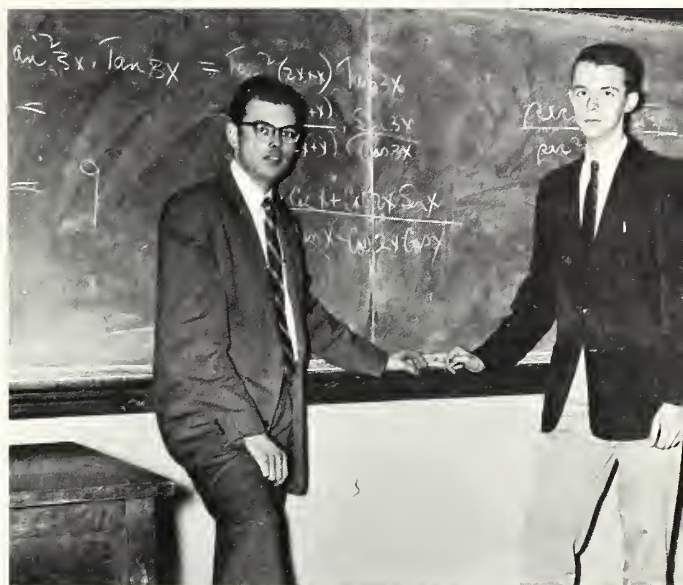

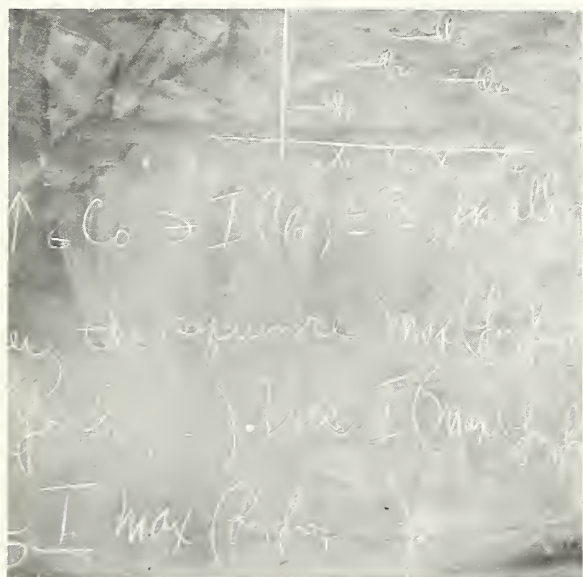

The Saccheri Mathematics Academy, affectionately known as the Math Club, has undergone a complete reorganization this year. Under the direction of its new faculty moderator, Mr. Frank Kammel, a new constitution was drawn up.

Elections were the next order of business; and as a result of the poll, Matt Hutton was elected president. Tim Himmelheber became the new vice-president, and Steve Pretl received the dual post of secretary-treasurer.

After these organizational matters were completed, a tentative schedule of activities for the year was composed. A club publication was planned; and there has been discussion and design of other neoteric activities, such as tutoring sessions for underclassmen in math. The influx of new underclass members bodes well for the fulfillment and expansion of the program in the coming year.

MATH CLUB

Mr. Kammel and Tim Himmelheber are in agreement: If Freshman math doesn't get you, Sophomore math will.

An accessible but nontrivial example of the pathology of moduli of higher dimensional varieties or $2+2=5$.

"I've worked it out. Taking the n-th term of my formula, I was able to develop a unique solution which proves beyond a doubt that this horse can't lose."

Moderator and officers "take a breather" from their microscopic investigations.

MENDEL CLUB

"Which came first, the chicken or the egg?" No, the Mendel Biological Club does not presume to give the thinking man's answer to this excruciating riddle. Its principal aim is to provide for its members a point of contact with the biological sciences outside the classroom and laboratory. Thus, through a series of lectures prepared and delivered by the members of the club, an opportunity is given to everyone to augment his knowledge in the ever-widening field of biology.

This past year student lectures have covered various topics, ranging from tranquilizers to biological warfare and space medicine. These lectures were generally well attended and did not fail to stimulate the participants into seeking further information on those particular topics.

In addition, the lectures were ample evidence of the club's effort to instill in its members an interest in current research and to keep them abreast of new developments in the biological sciences.

Toward the end of the year a very enthusiastic group participated in a field trip to the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology in Washington. This excursion drew the curtain on an active and successful year.

Here's some specimen that didn't escape the notice of Ken Gray and comrades, Northern, France, and Hsieh.

Biology seems most interesting. Do these biologists realize that gene mutations and variations are responsible for their phenotypes?

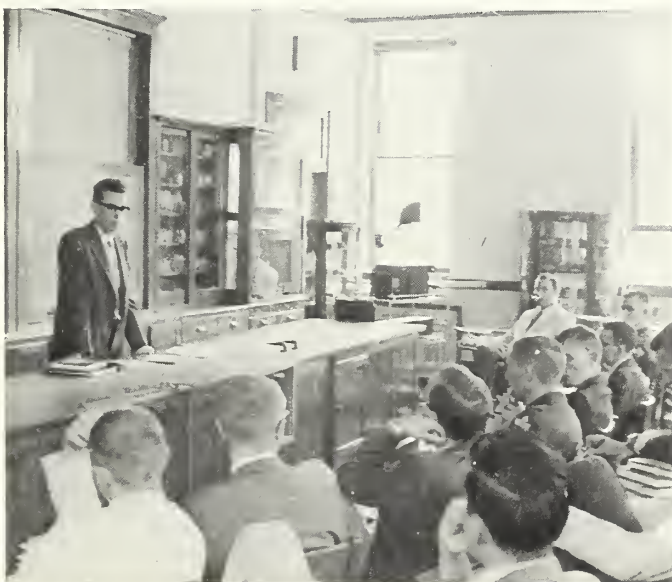

PHYSICS CLUB

Realizing the importance of physics in today's world, these members of the Physics Club hope to gain added knowledge from the student lectures delivered at the bi-weekly meetings.

The Angelo Secchi Academy was founded in the 1860's for the physics students and was rejuvenated in the late 1940's. The academy is affiliated with the American Institute of Physics, through which each member receives the magazine Physics Today, thereby keeping the student abreast of the latest developments in physics.

Under the presidency of Joe Brocato and the moderation of Dr. Weigman, the scope of the academy has been broadened to include engineers and any students with an interest in fields related to physics and engineering. A new constitution has been adopted, and beginning this year, an annual award will be presented to a member for his outstanding contribution and participation in the academy. Because of the increased interest and activity, membership has tripled in the past year.

The academy's purpose is to develop and further the student's interests in physics, engineering, and related fields. It accomplishes this end by encouraging members to give lectures on a subject of their choice in either of the two fields. These talks are supplemented by more formal addresses by guest lecturers prominent in the scientific world.

Jerry Daly offers suggestions to Dr. Weigman and Joe Brocato on a physics project.

Joe Brocato, president, takes the floor to explain to the members how Newton's laws fail to explain nuclear behavior.

RADIO CLUB

For the radio fan Loyola College has recently organized a Radio Club to help promote interest in electronics. Members with amateur licenses are able to broadcast over the club's 175-watt transmitter, which is powerful enough to be heard over most of the United States and Canada. For those without licenses there are code classes and the opportunity to practice the code on automatic machines, in preparation for the examination required of all amateur operators.

Amateur radio, however, is not the sole interest of club members. At its bi-weekly meetings, under the direction of its president, Jim Melody, the club hears student lectures on electronics. Movies are also shown on occasion, and field trips are taken to local radio stations and other points of interest.

The club moved into its new office in the Student Center at the end of January and soon was putting to good use the opportunities a private place made available. Not only is the station now operable on all school days, but members also have space for personal projects and experiments.

Ron Sacker and President Jim Melody explain the use of the short-wave transmitter to a fellow member.

Club members don't seem to be enjoying their new environment. They must miss the electronic equipment.

Realizing the importance of a successful orientation program, the Academy of Student Orientation began preparations during the early summer. With the aid of Fr. Galvin and Fr. Bourbon, their moderators, A.S.O. members Dick Keene, John Healy, Bill Corcoran, Bill Iampieri, and Mike Plott made plans for the three-day orientation period and edited the Activity Handbook. Their work was to be very successful.

With the co-operation of the activities' presidents and members of the Sophomore class, the A.S.O. successfully matriculated the Freshmen. Presenting the Freshmen with ample opportunities for investigating every aspect of student life at Loyola, the program included a welcoming speech by Tom Dwyer, president of the student body; a talk by Mr. Moritz, Loyola's career guidance counselor; an exhortation by "Lefty" Reitz, athletic director; and the President's Reception, at which every Freshman was personally introduced to Fr. Beatty, president of Loyola College.

Dick Keene, vice-president, and Mike Plott, president, ponder changes to be made in next year's Handbook.

Fr. Galvin, dean, and Fr. Beatty, president of the College, offer Evergreen's hospitality to the Freshmen, as the orientation program nears its end.

Tom Dwyer, president of the Student Council, cordially welcomes the Freshmen to the College, as Mike Plott and Father Bourbon prepare their talks.

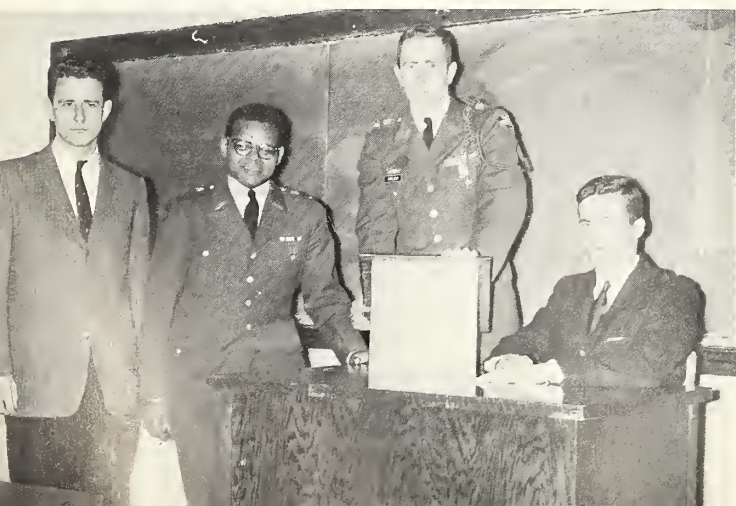

Mr. O'Brien, S.J., assistant moderator, considers the virtues of a point of strategy.

DEBATING

Fr. Davish and Mr. O'Brien flank Dwyer and Curtis, president and vice-president, as varsity and novice debaters stand firm.

T K A

One of the primary purposes of a liberal arts education is teaching the college student how to express himself adequately and clearly. Being able to speak before a group is frequently invaluable, and through debating, interested students may achieve rhetorical competence.

Thanks to the steady handling of Father Davish and Mr. O'Brien, S.J., forensics enjoyed moderate success at Loyola this year. A former New York attorney, Mr. O'Brien was especially valuable to the debating team, particularly for his knowledge of questions involving constitutional law.

By repeated victories over top-seeded teams in the major tournaments, the varsity debators earned themselves a "spoilers" reputation. Many times it was sheer initiative and spirit that enabled them to triumph. In local competition, however, they achieved their victories with greater ease.

In addition to the debating society there is at Loyola College a chapter of the national forensic honor fraternity, Tau Kappa Alpha. Led by its president, Pat Cullen, and its former president, Nelson Cooney, the chapter sponsored in early May the Tau Kappa Alpha Oratorical and Extemporaneous Speech Contest for the high school students of the Baltimore area. New members Tom Dwyer and Thom Curtis also assisted in the staging of the contest.

Working hand in hand with the faculty, Tau Kappa Alpha has achieved notable success in performing its various functions of service to Loyola.

Director Bob Dunn and President John Trently talk over casting possibilities for a Mask and Rapier production. Three difficult plays were attempted in the past year.

MASK AND RAPIER

Rehearsal can be a peculiar blend of verve and ennui, with imagination much in demand.

Because of continued high-calibre productions, Loyola's Evergreen Players have achieved an enviable reputation in the Baltimore area. Since more difficult plays were attempted this year, only three were presented.

When director Bob Dunn decided to do Shakespeare last November, he broke a thirty-two-year precedent. Not satisfied with one of the lighter comedies, Bob staged one of the "immortal bard's" most difficult tragedies, Othello. That the three performances were so well received bespeaks the excellence of the direction as well as the high quality of the acting. Nelson Cooney played the title role with majesty and authority. His lovely mate, Desdemona, was portrayed with poignancy and power by veteran actress Mary Lou Donnelly of the College of Notre Dame. Iago, one of the choicest villain roles of the stage, was vividly depicted by Paul Cawthorne, whose excellent diction and intelligent interpretation created the necessary mood of evil for the tragedy. The three leads were stoutly backed up by a large, talented, beautifully costumed, supporting cast.

Two weeks after Othello, the annual pre-Thanksgiving farce, Loyola Nite, was produced through the efforts of the moderator, Father Scanlan. In February, the Mask and Rapier Society hosted the Jesuit Collegiate Regional One-Act Play Contest. Loyola's Thespians presented as their offering The Clod, which earned them a third-place tie in a field of four. Improved material—John Van Druten's Bell, Book and Candle—made for a successful final production by Director Dunn, in which bewitching Ruth Zarubin of N.D.M. shared star billing with Freshman Ed Slawski.

As usual, Jim Molloy labored on sets and lights, while Jerry Hamilton, Gordon Hasenei, and Jerry Leahy puttered away artfully at make-up and kept the actors suitably attired. John Trently, this year's president, worked endlessly at all the little thankless tasks that go into a good production. He was assisted by the other club officers: Gordon Hasenei, vice-president; Dennis Smyth, vice-president; John Baynes, secretary; and Paul Cawthorne, treasurer.

Two officials of the WBAL-TV studios (not in costume) congratulate Loyola's cast of Othello, which put on such a startling performance for the television audience.

Miss Virginia Reinecke leads the Glee Club in a frantic rehearsal.

Glee Club meetings are not all "rehearsal"; careful study of scores must precede the effort to interpret them in sound.

GLEE CLUB

A new director, Miss Virginia Reinecke, has taken charge of the Evergreen Glee Club. Under her capable supervision the club entertained the patients in all the Catholic hospitals throughout the city in the week preceding Christmas. On the afternoon of December 13, a joint Christmas concert was given with Mt. Mercy College of Pittsburgh, and that evening a second performance was given at Trinity Preparatory School. Out-of-town concerts included those at Dunbarton College, Washington, and at Mt. Mercy. On campus the Glee Club sang at the following functions: the Mass of the Holy Ghost, the Christmas Midnight Mass, the dedication of the Student Center, and, of course, their own annual Spring Concert.

A schedule of daily rehearsals and the enrollment of many new members were evidenced in the improved quality of succeeding performances.

The Glee Club members live up to their name by being a happy group of singers in spite of very many hours of strenuous rehearsals.

The Green and Gray discusses future plans with moderator, Fr. Bourbon. More effective campus publicity at less expense is one of its aims.

GREEN AND GRAY

Students cheer for Coach "Lefty" Reitz during the first pep rally of the basketball season. By sponsoring such events, the Green and Gray has "lifted" school spirit enormously.

Two years ago, an energetic band of Loyola men sought to establish a club which would boost the spirit of Loyola in her every endeavor. This year, owing to assistance from the faculty and active participation from the students, the Green and Gray has been recognized as one of the most vivacious of Loyola's student activities.

The Greyhound costume which the club members purchased, and which, incidentally, they consider their finest achievement of past years, was "sporting" for another year by irrepressible Barry Truax. On the social scene, the Green and Gray was a cosponsor of the enjoyable Spring Sports Festival dance. Despite all obstacles, the Green and Gray's objective will always be: "Go boost the spirit of Loyola."

GREYHOUND

Typewriters sizzle as Tim Himmelheber, Rol Sturm, and Pete Cook race to meet the deadline for an issue of the Greyhound.

Harry's lamp may not be as bright as his product, but, then, it's only half as hot.

"After speaking with the higher echelons, Jim that picture of Brigitte has got to go."

THE GREYHOUND

This year's appearance of the Greyhound as a weekly marked the biggest change in this publication's thirty-three-year history.

Begun in 1926, the Greyhound has appeared in the same basic format of a bi-weekly, five-column paper until the second issue of this year when it changed to a weekly four-column paper. Under the promptings of its new moderator, Mr. Jon O'Brien, S.J., the Dean approved sufficient funds to make the new frequency possible. Then, Editor-in-Chief Jim Molloy, Sports Editor Bill Lohnes, and Business Manager Larry Parr combined with the rest of the staff to make the new style a success.

Many critics felt that there was a case of tail wagging dog this year when the Greyhound Bulletin stirred up so much controversy that the parent paper became uneasy. Begun innocuously as a daily list of events around campus and city, the Bulletin aroused much unfavorable comment on the liberal editorializing of its producer, "Harry" (John Baynes). His remarks on the social fraternity situation and the Student Council were especially causes of heated reactions.

Following a policy of changing officers at mid-year, the Greyhound acquired a new editorial board in February. Bob Reiter became editor-in-chief; Rol Sturm sports editor; and Tim Himmelheber, managing editor.

"This is Cartwright land, Mister, and you'll have to kill Adam and me to cut through it."

"It is not what men do, but what they would do that makes them great." — Robert Browning.

With its customary penchant for the understatement, the Evergreen Quarterly would call this "a rather shabby year." Whether due to the unprecedented illiteracy of the student body, a cultural lacuna, or the Edd Byrnes influence, it became increasingly difficult to find contributions, and for a while it seemed that the Quarterly would, indeed, never publish, and thus lose its Overland Stage franchise. Happily, such was not the case.

On Exam eve an issue did appear, phoenix-like from the ashes. Under the editorship of Tom Murn and Philip Flynn the Quarterly weathered what it hopes has been the worst crisis. With the assistance of Father Lavin, the faculty moderator, and the constant application of cold compresses, the tradition of a literary magazine has remained, bloody but unbowed.

You can be sure that Fr. Lavin does not close his eyes to the copy ready for printing.

Jim Molloy and Tom Murn are LIT's only day members.

Λ I T

"Recognition of excellence in the study of any literature" is the concern of Lambda Iota Tau, literary honor fraternity. Loyola's chapter boasts a membership drawn from avid students of literature — predominantly English — among both day and evening scholars. Literary discussions and programs in honor of prominent writers are the staples of fraternity meetings. Of special interest this year were the meetings at which new members Zelma Turner and William Laukaitis, both of the Evening College, presented original studies, required of all candidates, on the works of F. Scott Fitzgerald and John Keats.

EVERGREEN ANNUAL

Against a patchwork of early preparation, Faculty Editor McNally brings worry to the editor-in-chief.

Looking back on the past hectic scenes when we labored to meet the ominous deadline, we can justifiably feel relief in the fact that the annual was just that — annual. The basic problem we faced was, and probably ever will be: How does one staff even summarily describe in the course of one book a whole year's activities on the part of seven hundred students? If we have succeeded in solving this problem, it was in spite of ourselves, not because of ourselves.

We owe much to the EVERGREEN editor, Joe Brocato, but even more than we can say — or even care to admit — to Mr. Michael McDermott, S.J., our indefatigable moderator. Yet the individuals in charge could have accomplished nothing had it not been for the sundry members of the student body, their wives, and even friends who gave so unstintingly of their time. Finally, we must applaud the efforts of Father Galvin, whose firmness got the book to press.

Doug McCulloh and Ron Salafia scan yearbooks of by-gone days, trying to come up with some inspirations.

HONOR SOCIETY

The highest awards given to a college student may vary with each university and college. At Loyola, as at all other Jesuit colleges and universities, membership in Alpha Sigma Nu, the National Jesuit Honor Society, is the pinnacle. Membership in this elite society is a standing symbol of one's scholastic achievements and of the honor and loyalty he has for his Alma Mater.

Among the graduates of the Class of 1960, five have been honored by being elected to Alpha Sigma Nu. Under the capable and helpful guidance of Fr. Galvin, the moderator, the work of ASN was handled efficiently by President Ed Metzbower, Joe O'Hara, Joe Notarangelo, Paul Cawthorne, and Mike Plott. Since the activities of the society are never publicized, only the members are aware of their work's gratifying results.

WHO'S WHO

Loyola College was honored this year by having fifteen members of its Senior class mentioned in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. The names of these students were listed in the publication's annual directory of outstanding collegians, and so brought to the notice of educational and commercial institutions throughout the country. This year's total was the largest ever selected from the Evergreen campus. Since the honor is bestowed on those who have excelled not only in scholastic achievement but also in manifestation of leadership in school activities, the College can be especially proud of these "men of Loyola." The validity of their selection can easily be attested by the fact that all of the honored are in the upper 25 per cent of the Senior class, as well as by the presence among their number of the presidents and captains of many of Loyola's activities and teams. (Somehow, the editors of the yearbook were also included.)

These Loyola students received national recognition for their academic excellence and leadership. This year, fifteen of Loyola's Seniors, the largest number in the school's history, were selected for this honor.

Officers of the United States Army do not just happen. A military bearing and wisdom in the exercise of command are acquired only by dint of continued application to the school of the soldier and exposure to situations requiring a show of leadership. Such training and a recognition of its successful completion are both provided in the military societies which exist among the cadets of Loyola College.

The National Society of Pershing Rifles is represented on the Evergreen campus by Company T-5. The Company accepted sixty Freshmen as pledges in September. Of these, fifty-four were awarded membership at the Military Ball in late November.

T-5's trick drill team participated in Baltimore's St. Patrick's Day parade and the annual Cherry Blossom parade in Washington. The team also took high honors at the Pershing Rifles Spring Regimental Drill Meet.

Skane strides through the ranks of the PR drill team to assume command, during festivities at the Military Ball.

MILITARY

The members of Loyola's chapter of the Association of the United States Army stand in a formation which is strictly non-military.

Rifles, of course, were designed for more than fancy carrying, and Loyola's Rifle Team made the real intent of the weapon clear to all, once it had its new rifle range in the Student Center. Off to a slow start for want of a suitable place to practice, the team began to show its old shooting prowess as soon as the target situation had been ameliorated. Since no marksman was lost to the alumni this June, the rifle team can be expected to regain next fall its position at the top of local ROTC competition.

Cadet officers require a deeper understanding of the United States Army than do underclassmen, and to aid them in its acquisition the Association of the United States Army sponsored talks by prominent Army men and showed a number of films. The most distinguished of the cadet leaders were given recognition by being admitted to the national honor society, the Scabbard and Blade.

Cadets Edward Zepp, Michael Schmidtman, Patrick Cullen, and Gordon Hasenei gather around Captain Frydendall to make plans for a gala Military Ball and the choosing of its queen.

ATHLETICS

EMIL (LEFTY) REITZ
*Director of Athletics
Basketball, Baseball*

EDWARD (NAPPY) DOHERTY
*Assistant Athletic Director
Intramurals, Basketball*

"Lefty" Reitz is the grand-daddy of the Loyola corps. He graduated from Calvert Hall, where he was a three-letter man. As a Senior, he was All-Maryland in basketball and baseball. Villanova was the next step, and "Lefty" again played the three major sports. He also coached 150-pound football and was captain of the baseball squad in his fourth year.

The "Lefthander" graduated in 1933 and began a pro baseball career as a first baseman. He played for Albany, York, and Danville, but was compelled to retire because of an injured arm.

He began coaching at the University of Baltimore, and managed at Charlottesville that summer. "Lefty" joined the Loyola coaching staff in 1938 and was appointed Athletic Director.

Bill McElroy began his sports career at Mt. St. Joe where he won a total of twelve letters, participating in track, soccer, and cross-country. Bill made the All-Maryland soccer team two years and was the MSA mile champ one year.

After graduating, he was employed by the Bethlehem Steel Company and also served as a sportswriter for the Community Press of Dundalk. In this capacity, he organized the annual Steel Bowl football classic, still a thriving and colorful event.

"Mac" came to Loyola in 1946 as coach of the track and cross-country teams. He is also the affable manager of the campus bookstore. Away from Loyola, he serves as a promotional leader for the Bureau of Recreation.

Nap Doherty is a member of the select group of people who call Brooklyn, New York, their birth place. In 1945 he enrolled at St. Joseph's Prep, in Bardstown, Kentucky, where, for three years, he was named to the all-conference basketball team.

He then moved to Baltimore and attended Loyola College. While playing for the Hounds, he scored over one thousand points and was voted All-M-D Conference honors in his Junior and Senior years.

Nappy spent the next two years in the army where he played two seasons for the Fort Dix team. After his release from the service, he returned to Loyola. For the last three years he has coached the "B" squad, headed sports publicity, and directed intramurals.

Molding Bodies

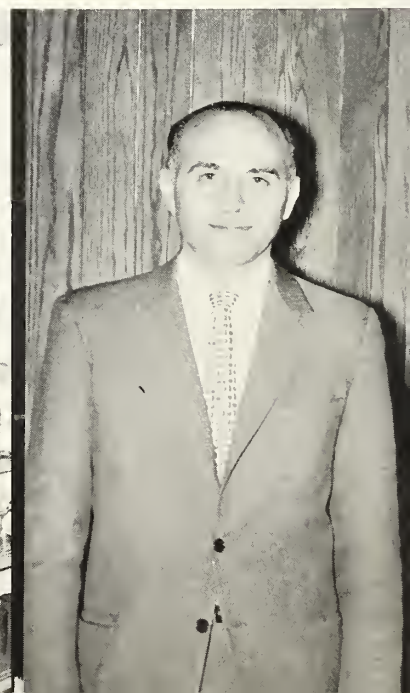

Vince Colimore, Loyola's tennis mentor, began his athletic endeavors at Loyola High School, in Baltimore, where he played tennis, basketball, baseball, and football. In his Senior year he captained the tennis and basketball squads.

In his early years of teaching, Vince coached tennis at Loyola High and later directed the 110-120-pound basketball squad at St. Joseph's in Philadelphia.

After a three-year stint in the army, during World War II, he returned to Baltimore in 1946. Since this time, he has served as an instructor in French and as tennis coach at Loyola College. With the outbreak of the Korean conflict, he briefly interrupted his educational, in favor of his military, career. After ten months service, he returned to Loyola to stay.

Loyola's aqua-men have had Bill Klarner as their head coach for the past decade. Born in Washington, D.C., he came to Baltimore where he attended high school at City. For two years he was a member of the football and swimming teams.

Bill entered Loyola College in 1947, and because of the accelerated program then in effect, he graduated in 1950. During his three years at Loyola he performed for the swimming team. In his Senior year he was undefeated in the 200-yard breaststroke and won the M-D title, indoor and outdoor, in this event.

He returned to Evergreen in 1950, and in the ensuing ten years, his teams have won five conference championships and lost but four M-D meets.

Guiding Minds

Charlie Wenzle has completed his seventh year as head lacrosse coach at Loyola. He was born in the lacrosse-conscious city of Baltimore and attended high school at Poly, where he performed on the midfield from 1944 until his graduation in 1948.

Charlie entered the University of Maryland the next year and secured a position, which he held for four years, on the defense for the varsity there. In 1954 he was appointed to his present post at Loyola.

He is a firm believer in a hustling, well-conditioned squad, and as a consequence, his teams are always recognizable by their spirited, hard-hitting play. When not holding court on the practice field at Loyola, Charlie can usually be found on the premises at Mervo Tech, where he is the football line coach.

Tommy Lind, the coach of the soccer team, has a colorful, sporting background. At Mt. St. Joe he played two years of soccer and one of baseball and was selected to the All-Maryland Scholastic Association teams in his Senior year.

At Loyola he performed for three years on the soccer field and four on the diamond. He was selected for the All-Mason-Dixon teams twice for the former and four times for the latter.

After college, Tommy swung into a professional-baseball career. During the next four years he played A, AA, and AAA ball, for Beaumont, Texas and Columbus, Ohio. He retired in 1955.

Tommy took over the soccer-coaching reins at Loyola during 1955. He is also an insurance salesman.

RICHARD CLEM
Wrestling

At twenty-three, Dick Clem is not only the youngest, but the most recent, addition to the coaching staff at Loyola. He was assigned the task of bringing wrestling back to Loyola. He responded, published a wrestling bulletin, and recruited approximately fifteen candidates. His team responded with the best record in years.

Dick attended Towson State Teachers College and was a star on the wrestling team. In addition, he played four years of soccer and baseball. In soccer he was on the All-Southern and All-M-D teams twice.

As a wrestler, Dick won the 167-pound division in Mason-Dixon competition for three consecutive years. In the 1958 tournament matches, he was voted the Outstanding Wrestler.

Senior Paul Sherman, the team captain, displays the form which carried him to many victories.

Loyola's 1959 Cross-Country team emerged from their dual-meet season with an undefeated record. This enviable achievement was due largely to the five returning lettermen: Seniors Paul Sherman (Captain) and John Burton, and Sophomores Wayne Leidner, Lewis Smith, and Mike Abromaitis. The squad received welcome help from Freshmen Mike Burton and Hank McGraw, who scored consistently throughout the season. Rounding out the team and providing needed depth, Bill Jenkins, Brian McCarthy, Tom Kenney, and Frank Shap repeatedly gave forth their best efforts.

The dual-meet tour began on a winning note with the first perfect score in team history, a 15-40 win over Gallaudet. Spurred on by this sparkling opener, the Harriers extended their string to fourteen consecutive victories and topped off a very successful season by winning the second annual Loyola Invitational Meet, triumphing over Mt. St. Mary's, 37-43.

In the Mason-Dixon finals, Loyola placed third in team score, while Paul Sherman and Lew Smith received medals for their efforts.

Far in the fore, Sherman traverses the slope near the chapel on the course at Evergreen.

The remainder of the pack follows far behind in the second annual Loyola Invitational Meet.

Soccer Team Hard Drivers

Competitive spirit and determined practice brought the 1959 soccer team from an early trough to an impressive string of victories.

During the first half of the season, the squad dropped decisions to Maryland, Mt. St. Mary's and American U. and fought Hopkins and Towson State Teachers to draws. With the Georgetown game, however, Coach Tommy Lind's crew looked like an entirely different team. While the defense was holding the opposition to nine goals, the offense came to life scoring twelve times. During this spurt, the Hounds defeated Georgetown and Randolph-Macon and ended a three-year drought by conquering Catholic U. 3-0. Following a loss to Baltimore U.'s defending champions, the home team played their best game of the season, although losing in double overtime to unbeaten Western Maryland.

Loyola was well represented on the Mason-Dixon all-conference squad with Wade Bowman, standout fullback, selected for the first team and Captain Jerry Beck, Rick Campbell, and Dennis Ray on the second team.

Jerry Beck boots one goalward in the closing seconds of the game against Washington College, as the goalie vacates the nets in a final attempt to halt him.

Goalie Don Wallenhorst, with a timely save, spoils Washington College's attempt to pierce the Hound defense, as Bowman and Ray hasten to his assistance.

Freshman fullback Rick Campbell attempts to break up a goalward rush during the Washington College fray, which was won by Loyola by a score of 1-0.

Wrestling Returns

Bill Iampieri tucks in his opponent's leg, breaking him to the mat for a takedown in the 123-pound class.

On Wednesday, January 6th, the 1960 Loyola wrestling team opened its season against Gallaudet of Washington, D.C. This was the first match in Loyola's return to the mat and Bill Iampieri got Loyola off to an auspicious start in the 123-pound weight division by pinning his opponent in five minutes and thirty seconds. However, by the end of the match the score was 29-8 in favor of Gallaudet.

After the next two matches Loyola's record stood at no wins and three losses, but no one was really discouraged by the performance of this inexperienced but determined aggregation.

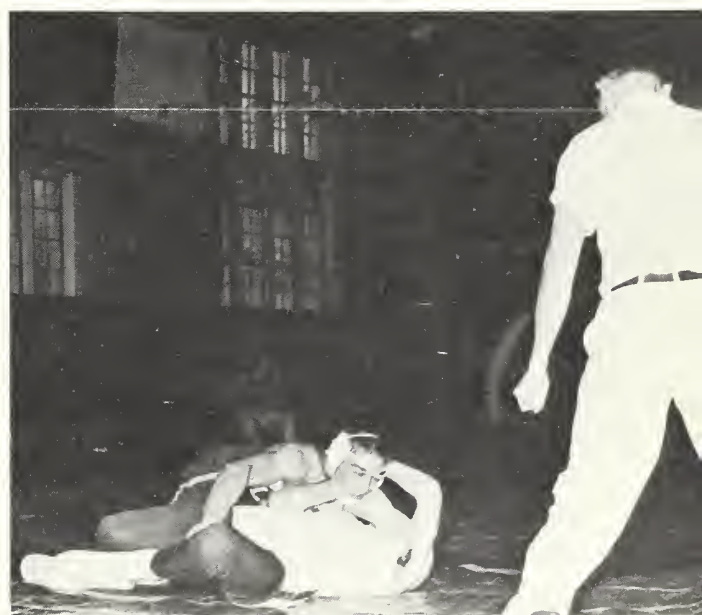

Beginning with the Towson match, the Hounds really shaped up. Under the able guidance of their first-year coach, Dick Clem, they tromped over Towson State Teachers, Hampden-Sydney, Western Maryland, and Catholic University, while dropping a close decision to William and Mary and bowing to American U.'s champs.

Winding up the season with a .500 record in league play can be considered quite an achievement for a team in its first full year of revival. In the annual Mason-Dixon tournament at Gallaudet, Charlie Carey reached the semi-finals while Buck Parr was not eliminated until the final round.

Loyola Quint Takes 10

With a little more beneficence on the part of Lady Luck, the Greyhounds would probably have enjoyed a more successful season. With the assistance of the fickle Dame Fortune, a few of the six games decided by fewer than five points could have been annexed to the win column.

Even after a heartbreaking loss to defending champions American University in the opening game, the future looked far from dim for the Hound cagers. Taking to the road for their annual northern swing, not foreseeing the difficulties ahead, the squad soon became aware of the grim companion with whom they traveled. She soon made known her presence as the Green and Gray dropped decisions to St. Francis College of Brooklyn and Hofstra by a combined total of six points and were outclassed by strong St. Peter's. Returning home, downtrodden and dismayed by their early reversals, the Greyhounds found themselves and pushed their infamous companion into a dark corner, by trouncing Western Maryland, Towson State Teachers College, and Adelphi.

With the gloomy overcast finally beginning to clear, the Christmas holidays intervened. Upon returning to the court wars, the Hounds dropped a hard-fought decision to cross-town rival Baltimore U. in a game reminiscent of the early season tribulations. Before a deep breath could be drawn, Seton Hall University had visited the scene and inflicted another blow on our sagging warriors.

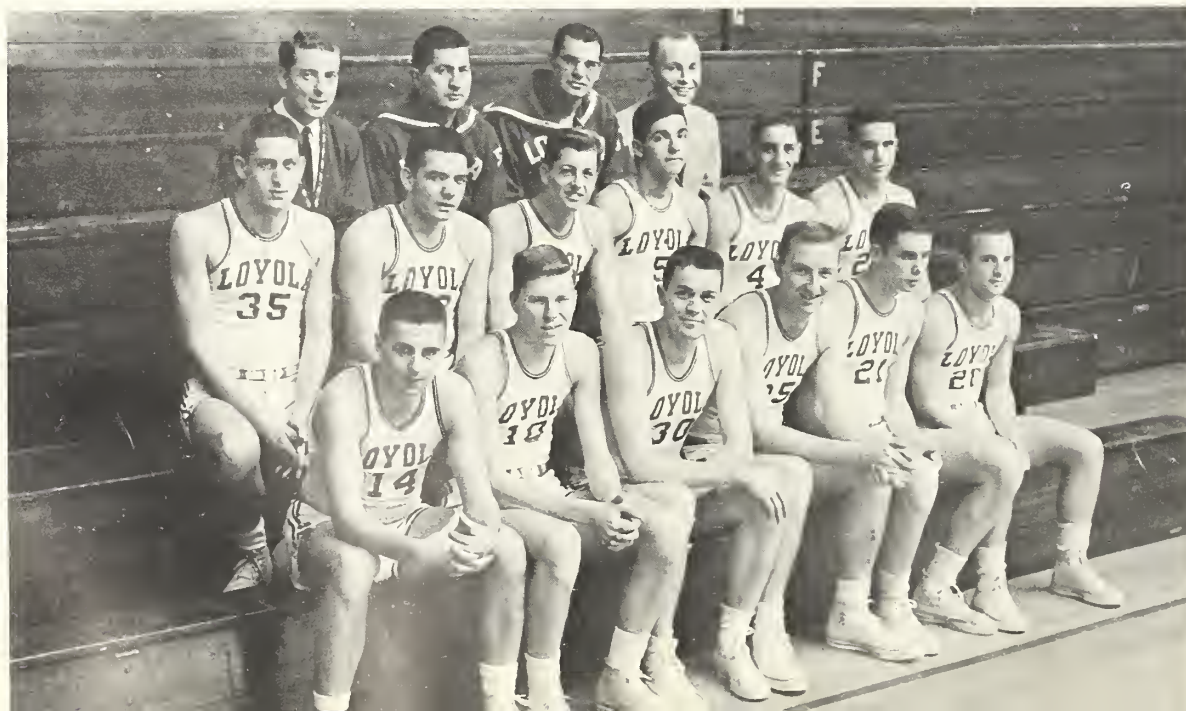

At this point, with the record standing at three wins and six losses, the Greyhounds were mercilessly plunged into the all-important Mason-Dixon loop competition.

Taking heart from an easy win over Hopkins, the squad rolled on to down Washington College and Catholic University before adversity, in the guise of Mt. St. Mary's, set in. After that sad evening in the mountains, American U. was the next foe. In a tension-packed replay of the opening game, our errant companion re-established her hold, as American U. eked out another victory on its march to the loop championship. Turning the tables, the Hounds rebounded with a strong game to defeat highly-touted Belmont Abbey.

Still picked by several of the experts as dark horses in the M-D race, the Loyola five could not shake their misfortunes as Mt. St. Mary's slipped by the Hounds with a two-point victory. Rallying for a final spurt before the tournament, the Green and Gray trounced Washington College and Hopkins again, and dropped Towson Teachers out of the tournament with a triple-figure effort in the playoffs.

The season was doomed to end as it had begun, though, with a heartbreaking loss. Lady Luck must again intervene. In the tournament the Loyolans could not shake her touch and dropped a one-point decision to the host Catholic U. squad.

Watch the ball! That's the byword, and O'Hara and Murn are doing just that as Bogusky grabs the ball in the midst of the enemy, in this case Baltimore U.

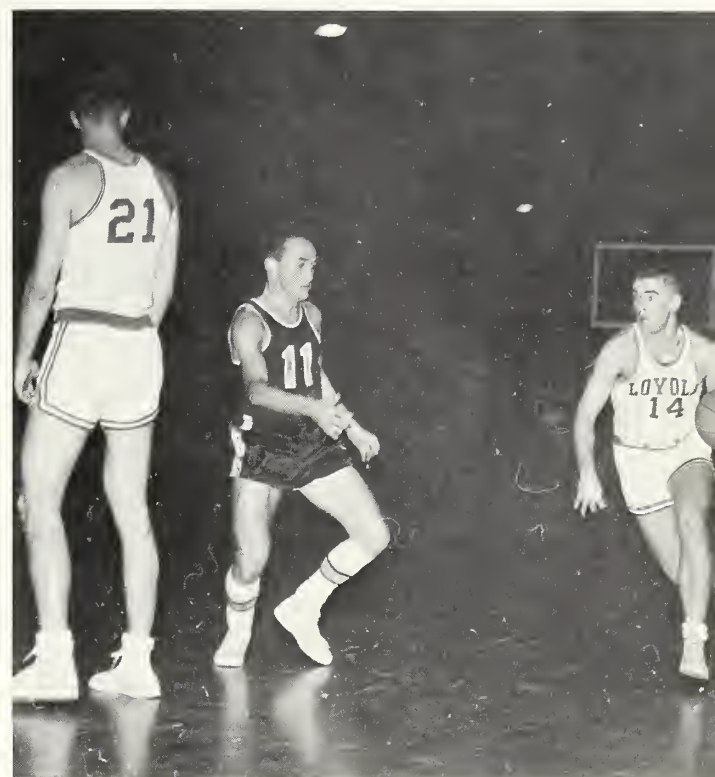

John Heagney breaks through for two more points, as the Hounds down Johns Hopkins, 76-55, at Evergreen.

It's up and in. Joe O'Hara gets two in the early season loss to Hofstra.

Frosh Cagers

Loyola's 1959-60 Freshman basketball team consisted of a quartet of out-of-town boys and five products of the local schools. Heading the out-of-town delegation was Bob Schu from Philadelphia's North East Catholic High School. Bob stands 6' and averaged 13 points per game this year. Brooklyn's Bishop Laughlin High contributed 6'4" Tony Rivezzo and diminutive Charlie O'Donnell, a 5'6" hustler, who averaged 10.6 and 8.9 points per game, respectively, for the Greyhound squad. The fourth member of the group was 6'4" Gary Cucuel from Greenwich High, Greenwich, Connecticut. Leading the local talent were two former Mt. St. Joe hoopsters, 6' John Killen who averaged 11.1, and 6'3" Don Wallenhorst, who added 7.8 markers per game to the team output. Loyola High was represented by 6'3" Mickey Gardner who rebounded well and helped out on scoring, 5'11" Mike Burton, and 6'2" Dorsey Baldwin.

The Freshman team, under the guiding hand of Nap Doherty, opened its season with a bitterly contested defeat at the hands of Baltimore Junior College, 70 to 69. Even in a losing effort, there were several bright spots. Tony Rivezzo's twenty-nine point performance, a seasonal high for the team, and the fine teamwork of this squad in their first game together, were sources of encouragement. But, following this game the squad was plagued by injuries and did not reach its full potential until the season was half-spent. In spite of these misfortunes, sparked by the hustle of Schu, Killen, and O'Donnell and the shooting of Rivezzo, the team ended its season with a record of six wins and nine defeats. This record could just as easily have read eight victories and seven defeats had they been able to eke out decisions in the narrow defeats at the hands of Baltimore Junior College and later Johns Hopkins' Frosh squad.

Vic Corbin, Loyola's top diver, polishes his form in practice.

Mermen Masters Of Many

Continuing a streak started at the end of last season, the Greyhound natators splashed to victory in their first five starts this year. This feat ran their skein to ten straight triumphs, the longest in the team's history. The Hounds finished the season with an over-all record of eight wins while losing two at the hands of Mason-Dixon champs American U. and perennially strong La-Salle.

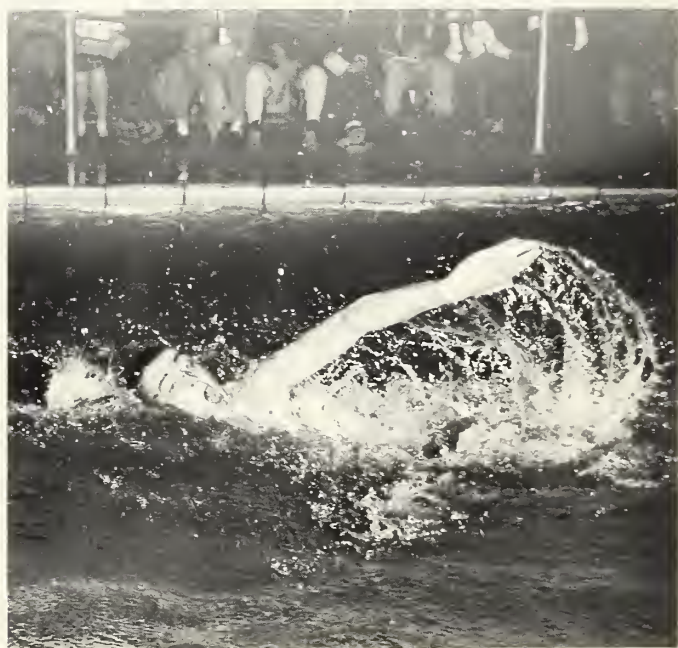

The season's success can be traced to the effort of every man on the team. Several of the mermen, however, came through with outstanding performances. Marty Pilsch emerged as the leading scorer in his first year of college competition. Ken Freimuth, another newcomer, finished the season unbeaten in the 200-yard breaststroke. Filling in a void which could have seriously hampered the squad, Vic Corbin scored consistently in diving. Coach Klarner's expectations for support from his three-year men were fulfilled by Seeley and Pete Powley, and Paul Karpers. Pleasant surprises were the performances of Lew Smith, Jim Burns, and Tony Hughes.

In the Mason-Dixon tournament at the climax of the season, Pilsch and Freimuth again proved their prowess, the latter setting meet records in the 200-yard breaststroke and the 200-yard butterfly. As a team, Loyola finished second in the tournament.

The Powley twins capture first and second honors in the 50-yard freestyle with nearly identical times.

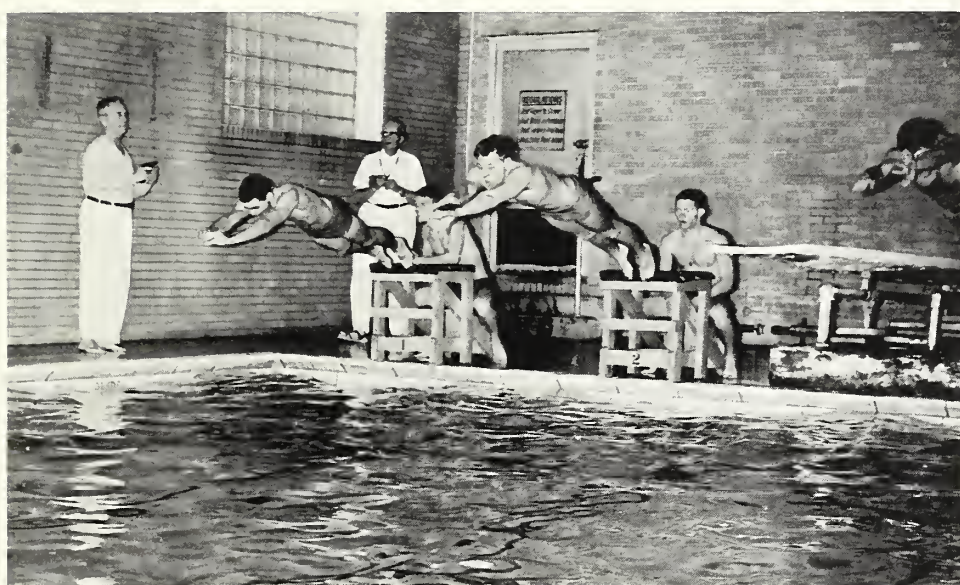

Freshman Jim Burns displays fine freestyle form, as he pulls out all the stops in the final stretch.

High Hurdler Tom Vondersmith in action at Evergreen.

Into the sawdust! Senior Tom Gray works out at the broad jump in one of the first outdoor practices.

On Track And Field

The first sign of spring on the college campus is usually the appearance of the thinclads hard at work on the cinder oval. Such was not the case this year; when spring arrived the ground had not yet shed her snowy mantle and the track team was forced indoors.

After several weeks of conditioning in the gym, the Greyhounds were liberated by the approach of warm weather, and proceeded to accustom themselves to the new running surface at Evergreen. Led by Captain Paul Sherman and Seniors Stack Burton, Tom Gray, Vic Dragin, and Vince Mazzuca, the squad was hopeful for another winning season.

Once again strong in the track events with Sherman, Burton, and Lew Smith handling the distance events and Arnie Sapperstein the sprints, the addition of a pole-vaulter and a shot-putter from the freshman ranks is expected to lend the necessary balance to the overall effort.

Freshman Dennis Lingenfelter displays his pole-vaulting form.

Crosse Handlers

Limited to only a few day's practice by the unseasonable weather, the Greyhound lacrosse team was thrown into competition with untried recruits at prime positions. Balancing this disadvantage, however, is the schedule revision which replaced perennial championship contenders Maryland and Baltimore U. with Post College and Gettysburg. This move should aid the team's won-lost record as well as their morale. The squad is led by Seniors Jerry Beck, Mike Spigelmire, Pat Cullen, Hugh Coyle, Rick Pyle, and Joe Weber. Additional aid is expected from returnees Billy Asher on the midfield and Jim Lamar at attack.

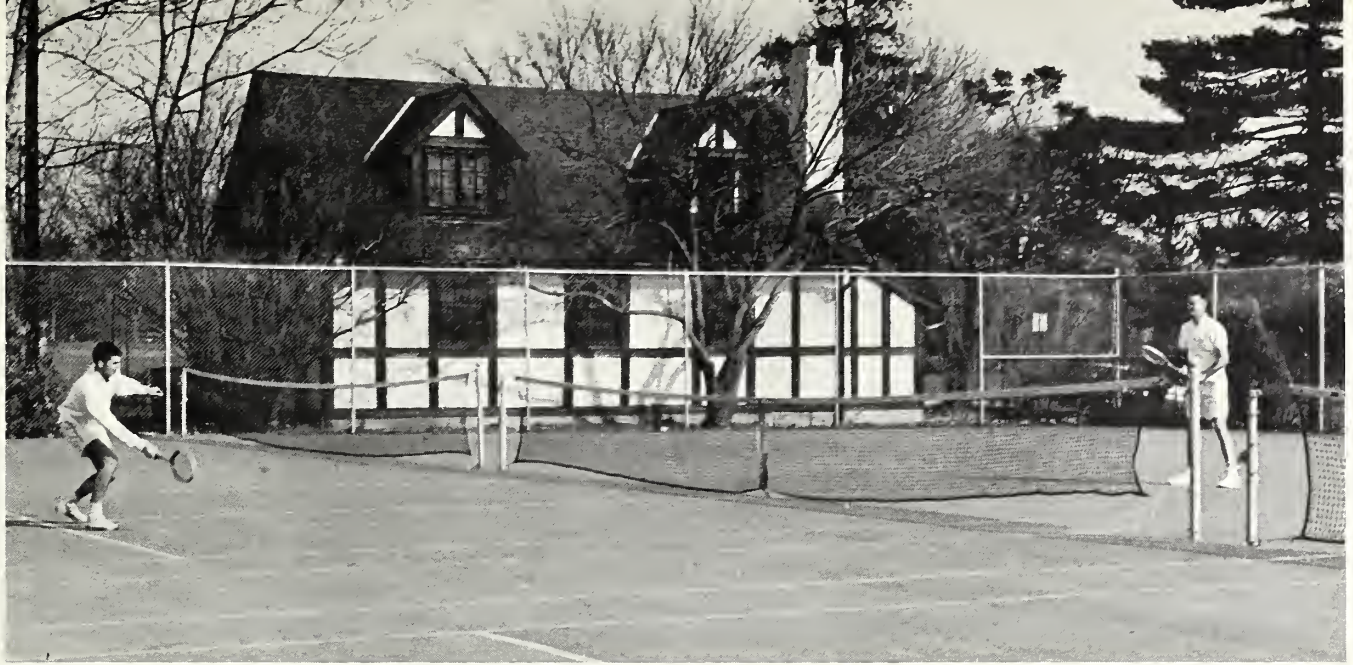

Washington and Lee finds its attack stymied temporarily by Ham Dugan and the Hound defense, massed before the net.

Passing from behind the goal, Senior attackman Hugh Coyle finds midfielder Pete Powley cutting through.

Racket Wielders

The 1960 Greyhound tennis team relied on a combination of veterans and newcomers to carry it through a tough season. The enthusiasm of the members was undoubtedly a major factor throughout the year.

The return of Jim Fowler, a member of the last championship team at Loyola in 1957, was a welcome sight. Juniors Don Torres and Tad Carper, returnees from last year's squad, were again on hand to provide the team with seasoned performers. Sophomores Dan Michaelis, Dave Mulrooney, and Bill Knoche, with a year of college competition behind them, made use of their experience to bolster the squad. Among the newcomers, Jim Mohler from Mt. St. Joe and Barry Tillman from Towson High provided depth and kept the pressure on the veterans. Coach Vince Colimore, in his fifteenth year as head tennis mentor, can look forward to the return of all the members of this year's squad and an even better record during 1961.

Greyhound Nine

Led by the return of three All-Conference veterans from last year's Mason-Dixon Northern Division Champs, the Greyhounds fielded another speedy, powerful ball club. Despite the loss of several key operatives from the 1959 squad, added strength was obtained by the shuffling of last year's personnel and the transfusion of new life from the Freshman ranks.

Well-fortified at first base with the return of Ron Seager, and with second base secure in the hands of Buck Effinger, Coach Reitz had to select a shortstop and a third baseman from among Seniors Bill Lohnes and Eric DiNenna and underclassmen George Yurek and Charlie O'Donnell, all of whom looked good in early season drills.

The outfield — reading from left to right — John Killen, Dave Marshall, and Dave Carney demonstrated fine speed and defensive ability and backed this up with fine power at the plate.

On the mound, veterans Ray Short and Ray Reilly, assisted by newcomers Phil Potter and Mickey Gardner, provided the nucleus of a strong staff. Handling the staff were Nick Jackson, an outfielder last year, and Wade Bowman, who cavorted for the track team last year.

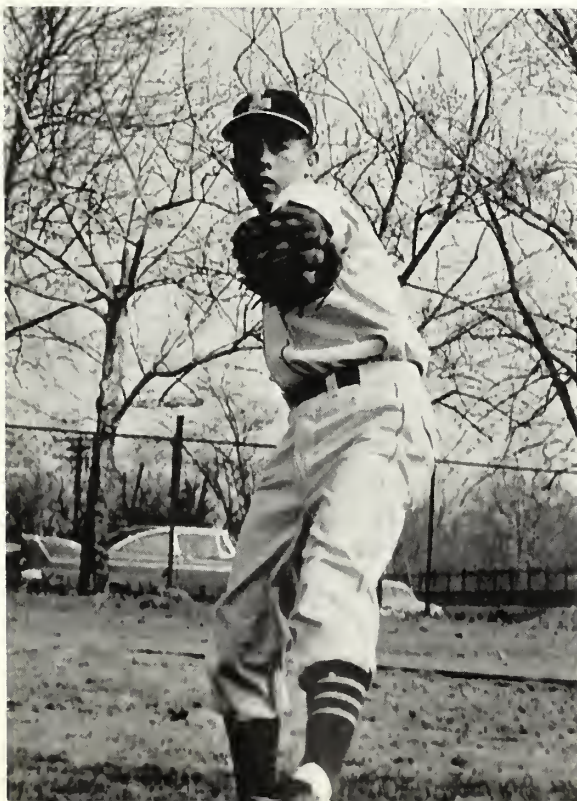

Ron Seager belts one as the runner breaks for second.

Mount Pleasant golf course, one of the municipally operated courses, was again the center of operations for the Loyola golf team. The team, coached by Nap Doherty, plays the majority of its matches on this layout and is familiar with many of the pitfalls which trap the unwary visitor.

Returning from last year's squad was the number one operative, Junior Chuck Pessagno, who in the words of Coach Doherty, "can always be counted on for a consistent performance." Backing him up this year in the Mason-Dixon Conference were returnees Captain Bob Reilly, Ed Conway, and Jim Foley. Newcomers Jay Leonhart and Bill Mislowsky were expected to fill in and aid the team in the regular season and the championship-determining tournament.

Included in the schedule were Washington College, American University, Western Maryland, Baltimore U., Johns Hopkins, Mt. St. Mary's, and Gallaudet.

One of the most note-worthy of the clubs at Loyola is the well-known Block "L" Club. Its function is two-fold: first, to promote fellowship among the athletes at Loyola, and second, to further the athletic activities of the school.

To become eligible for membership in the club, a student must win a letter, major or minor, in inter-collegiate competition. Also, one may be a member if he assists in any athletic programs presided over by either the Director of Athletics or the President of the Block "L" Club. Honorary membership is bestowed upon any alumnus who was awarded a letter in past years.

Heading the organization in 1960 were President Hugh Coyle (lacrosse); Vice-President Mike Sneeringer (basketball); Treasurer George Krapp (swimming); and Secretary Paul Sherman (track and cross-country). Under their direction, the club sponsored the "Swing into Spring" dance for the benefit of the building fund.

Just Among Ourselves

The intramural program at Loyola is an integral part of the well-rounded education offered by the school. This activity commands more attention and arouses more interest than any other subject around the school; over 50 per cent of the student body actively participated in this program during the past year. The entire program has flourished under the energetic and competent direction of Edward (Nappy) Doherty, who somehow finds time to promote this endeavor while handling several other assignments.

Included in the intramural set-up are double-elimination tournaments in touch football, basketball, and softball, and individual participation in tennis and table tennis. An added attraction in recent years has been the annual swimming meet in which each class is represented by one composite team. Participation in these events is limited to those students not participating in intercollegiate athletics, and each team must be composed of members of the same graduating class. Participants must be registered with the director before the start of the season.

STUDENT LIFE

Each year fall returns to Loyola. And as regularly as the seasons, the students return, too. Some of the faces are new. Most have been coming back for years. Yet, we are one group, one mind, one spirit — the sons of the Green and Gray. As the student body flows in with the fall tide — essentially the same but always with some new changes — so, too, is Evergreen growing with her sons, always continuous in essence, yet always progressive in accidents. Each wave of her adopted sons comes to know her more thoroughly, to love her more deeply, to serve her more selflessly. For Evergreen is the students' life.

Our life here is complete. No aspect of it is neglected. It is the integra vita for the integer homo. Realizing that her sons are composite beings, Evergreen provides the means to fulfill their composite needs. For man's intellect there are numerous and varied study programs, group seminars, cocurricular activities, scheduled lectures, and free hours for study in the library or lounge. For man's physique there are intercollegiate and intramural sports, free use of gymnasium, equipment, and athletic field; and the time is generously allotted to make use of them. For man's soul there is the presence of God in the Chapel of Our Lady of Evergreen, First Friday Mass, and many other spiritual exercises open to all. The student's thirst for truth, his hunger for knowledge, his needs for art and recreation — these are all met. Evergreen is our life, and it is a whole life.

There must be time and place for work. We can never deny it or avoid its ominous presence. Yet there is still much time for relaxation and enjoyment. The new Student Center may take on the atmosphere of a Paradise Casino. A snowfall may turn the walkway into a veritable havoc. Time may be consumed in many ways and many places, on and off campus. Sack time is found in the lounge, or, in spring, under the trees. There are still quiet hours for reading in the library or the lounge. Classes and free time, work and relaxation, these are all part of a student's life . . . the life of a son of the Green and Gray.

His life is of the physical . . .

. . . and of the aesthetic.

Growth, expansion, modernization: these comprise an important aspect of college life — for the student, and for the plant. This ideal was realized with the addition of the Andrew White Student Center. The first step of a three-stage building program to be carried out by the College and her alumni, this annex did more to raise student morale than a “full house” of A’s and B’s on a semester report card.

After the Christmas holidays, the student body moved coke bottles and lunch bags from the cramped, inadequate surroundings in the Library Building to the spacious, modern, and more efficient cafeteria in the Student Center. For relaxation there was the new lounge, which could comfortably accommodate over three times as many students as Xavier Lounge. Here were spent many hours of the second semester in studying, conversing, or playing chess, checkers, and cards.

As one Freshman summarized student reaction to the change, “The Seniors only got a taste of it, but we get the whole menu.”

8:15 The day starts typically for our student — in a mad dash of confusion. Books gathered into a graspable pile; clothes flung onto a half-awake body; a fumble for keys and glasses; into the car and pray the battery is in a good mood.

8:50 Ten minutes before the grind; time enough to park the car — but where? There's never a spot. The lot is full; Cold Spring Lane is full. Quick, behind the reservoir; not next to the fireplug! The last quarter mile is finished in a dash on foot.

9:00 Fifty more minutes to go before this class ends; why didn't I switch majors last year? How can he talk all this time about subsidiary ledgers? My eyes are so, so heavy. If I lean back he may not notice that I . . . am . . . fal . . . ling . . .

10:30 Sooner or later, within his four-year tenure, every student visits the most attractive spot on campus, the Registrar's office. And who can blame us for our visual and audible appreciation of such scenic wonders as these fair secretaries?

12:00 Time to check the Bulletin Boards; what new piece of dirt has "Harry" unearthed today? Checking too, to see if we are on the Dean's "other list"; to plan the week's activities by the meetings and notices posted; a life of looking.

12:30 Each day, at various times, the mind is turned off as the gustatory processes rule the hour. For those who don't bring food the line forms in "Joe's Dispensary." No matter how much we gripe, we don't stop eating . . . students never do.

2:00 The sweat begins as the "prof" smilingly hands out his contribution to a nervous breakdown; how is one supposed to remember what the operational policy of U.S. Steel is? I mean . . . after all, man . . .

4:20 The day would never be complete without the intervention of the "blue hand"; today it is a Chevy, tomorrow it may be a Ford; it may even be a 1921 Essex; but the summons surely won't fall on a Cadillac . . . after all, we are students.

1:00 The hour to watch Loyola's answers to the Globetrotters! Just to read the roster of intramural team names draws a good laugh — from the "Hairy Harries" and "Schnooks" to the "Moleskins." The names are as comical as some of the games.

3:00 No matter how interesting "the effect of radiation on the human body" is, there is always somebody who refuses to throw his whole heart into extracurriculars. And yet it is the sleepers who keep the activities flourishing.

The cycle of student life begins even before the individual becomes a son of Loyola. Each spring the College holds a competitive examination to determine her new sons. From the mass of examinees the elite will be chosen to fill the ranks of the Greyhounds and partake of an education and a way of life.

Across the vast montage of desks, faces, and aspirations run the eyes of men who may someday stand before these same aspirants, now as extortioners of knowledge, in the future as imparters of knowledge.

Thus begins the student's life, exactly as it will end . . . giving answers to questions.

The first real taste of college life for the Loyola student comes at Orientation. Essentially a three-day welcome, it affords the Evergreen initiates an occasion to learn about the school, its rules, its rulers, and the academic and physical setup before class routine begins. During Orientation the Frosh are given the opportunity to meet each other, to scrutinize the campus personally, and to make a gradual adjustment to college activity away from the menacing glares of the upperclassmen. Here, too, they receive their first "tap" by the activity heads and a taste of extracurriculars.

Designed to acquaint all interested students with possible postgraduate opportunities in their chosen fields, Career Day offers a program of panel discussions, each centering around one of the large commercial or professional fields. Men from industry, medicine, teaching, and science are invited to participate. These men, mostly alumni, come of their own choice; and the large student turnout must, in part, be inspired by their generosity.

Thus, within one year the cycle is complete — from pre-entrance examination to postgraduate planning. A new year brings a new cycle.

The student's life at Evergreen is seldom stale. When there isn't a test to study for, an activity to work for, or a varsity contest to watch, there is always time for the freshness of a fall or spring dance. The recent school year saw many such events.

The College launched its social season with the annual Freshman Welcome Dance in October. The Soph-sponsored affair afforded the gym a lively atmosphere, created by "Reds" Popoli's orchestra.

Yet, sometimes the students and their dates like to "step out" in formal attire. The Military Ball, held in November, provided the occasion. Even now, one may still recall the faint scent of an orchid or an echo produced by the Pershing Rifles' "manual of arms" demonstration.

Nor can the post-exam celebration, the "Prohibition Daze" dance, fade into obscurity for those who attended the flapper-style affair. Even the faculty got into the spirit of this one. Now the white ducks, derbies, shirt-garters, beaded necklaces are all safely tucked away once again till next January.

Besides the big affairs, there was always an occasion for a "simple" date. It might be for the Sodality-sponsored record hops after the basketball games, the games themselves, or for a "class outing" some uneventful weekend. Our time is always well spent, as team boosters, as terpsichorean masters, or just as students.

SEPTEMBER Never mention the word "tradition" in the presence of women. They don't even know what it means. Another precedent was set this month when Loyola became "co-ed." No one cares what their names are, nor why they are here. Nobody even complained.

OCTOBER The annual Rugby Game between the "pups" and the Sophs has its annual outcome — mayhem on the athletic field. For the Frosh it is a chance to rid themselves of their branding pup-caps. But the Sophs claim the referees are prejudiced — or paid.

NOVEMBER In the Evergreen tradition Thanksgiving becomes for, some, a time of thanksgiving for sanity. For others, there is Loyola Nite. The show-offs become the show; the introverts turn extrovert; and conformity succumbs to mild hysteria.

DECEMBER The crisp winter morning is broken by the acrid aroma of burning leaves. A note is hastily pinned on the Bulletin Board: "Would the owner of a two tone green sedan, license number MI-451-25 please move your car . . . your exhaust pipe is jammed."

JANUARY "Exams . . . Depart from me, thou troublesome, fatiguing, incomprehensible demons; and never cross my path again! Sleep, console my weary mind. Embrace me, soft pile of autumn remnants" . . . Could this be frustration?

FEBRUARY Snow is not an unusual sight in these parts nor are its after-effects. After all, who can tell what new baseball talent may be unearthed, or is it "unsnowed"? No, the only snow around is not exclusively found on test papers.

MARCH The fame of the Internal Revenue Department is a fast-spreading affair. It reaches Evergreen — a little late, but as inevitable as the Ides of March. Tables are consulted for deductions for ulcer-pills, tranquilizers, and No-Doz.

APRIL "Here's your chance, buddy. All the candidates for each office are listed by section. Remember, this isn't a national election, there's no pressure involved. Well, on second thought . . . my pal here is running for . . ."

MAY Spring brings a new year's growth of crabgrass. But as quickly as it grows it is methodically mowed down by Loyola's errant linksmen. Practice takes many forms and occurs in the strangest places. But the best "teeing-off" is down at the nineteenth hole.

JUNE Exam week comes up fast. It is finished even faster. Ocean City looks so very, very close. Nostalgia reigns . . . "I'll really miss the old place, and you guys too. But would somebody please pass me a towel so I can wipe the foam off my arm."

UNDERCLASSEN

Our Lady of Evergreen saw over two hundred Freshmen enter her chapel on campus early in September. From here they proceeded to Cohn Hall where the Academy of Student Orientation introduced the initiates to the campus, the Faculty, and the traditions of a liberal education at Loyola. After the concluding addresses of the President and the Dean, the entire group left the chapel wearing their traditional green and gray beanies.

In the wake of this invigorating presentation of Loyola, the class of 1963 formally began their college education.

Although they found it tough, they were not softened, as they so well proved by their victory over the Sophomores in the annual rugged rugby contest.

Boosted by such a consequence, they proceeded to make the Freshman Welcome Dance an outstanding success. Much esprit de corps was shown by active participation in intramural sports, and perhaps more outstanding is the number which became active in the Pershing Rifles.

Amid much advertising and political mayhem, they elected their class officers. Because of the co-operative and ambitious attitude of the Frosh, the administrative tasks of President Carl Manfre, Vice-President Daniel Galluzzo, Secretary Henry Becker, and Treasurer John Ramos were most pleasant.

PROCRUSTEAN SURVIVORS

After weathering the rigors of the previous year, the persevering Sophomores returned to Evergreen with their thoughts stretched to the difficult curriculum which they had to master in the coming two semesters. With more than usual initiative on their part, the class assisted the A.S.O. in acquainting the Freshmen with Loyola. But the time for such amusement quickly passed, and they addressed themselves to the academic encounters which the new year offered them.

Socially, the class of '62 publicized and staged the Freshman Welcome Dance in the Alumni Memorial Gymnasium, although some would agree that social-mindedness can be a bane. Victorious in preliminary skirmishes, they will stride bravely into the world of Aquinas and metaphysics.

Contingent as they are, the Juniors returned in September to Evergreen with great enthusiasm. They were now upperclassmen and were thereby privileged to embark upon that queen of sciences . . . Philosophy. For some, there was also the novelty of new classes, rendered by Advanced ROTC.

Under the able leadership of President John Healy, Vice-President John Heagney, Secretary Bob Bavis, and Treasurer Joe Curren, the members of the class of 1961 linked with their scholastic endeavor a show of true Loyola spirit. Although as Freshmen they lost the rugby game, their undaunted vivacity burgeoned in the fall semester of 1959 into active participation and leadership in the Loyola Nite farce and the intramural leagues.

B U S I N E S S

Time will thy sons disperse,
Seas may us part,
Still will each loyal son
keep thee enshrined,
Loyola! in his heart.

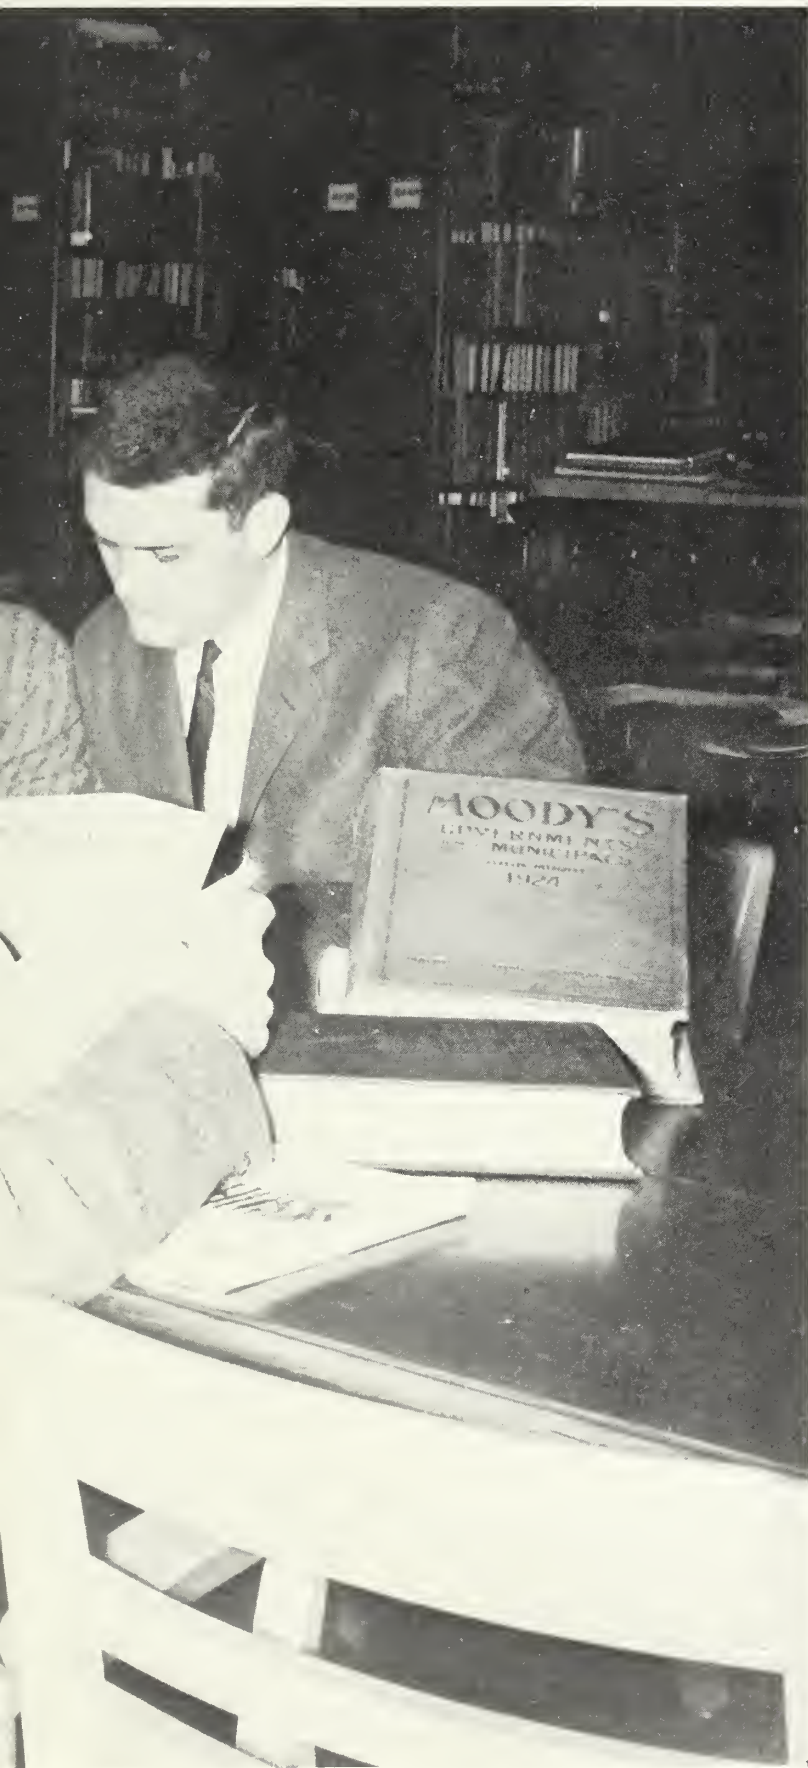

These top vote-getters of the Senior class show the enthusiasm that carried the class through the year.

Senior policy-makers assemble at the completion of a spirited and successful weekly council meeting.

A SOUVENIR OF FOREVER

Your Photograph

A fine professional photograph does two things for you . . . It represents you at the instant it is taken, and it keeps that You alive for later generations to see . . .

You will grow older, of course, but our talented artist-photographer will keep today's You forever young! . . . We are happy to be your official school photographer, and we'd be proud to be your personal photographer, too, to record all the other important events of your life.

Good Luck To The EVERGREEN OF 1961

Mr. Sidney Schultz, Sales Manager of H. G. Roebuck and liaison officer with yearbook staffs, points out to Joe Brocato, Mickey Pelczar, and Joe Bossle, that forty-nine other yearbooks on the Roebuck Master Printing Schedule met their deadlines.

The editors and staff of the Evergreen of 1960 sincerely express their thanks to H. G. Roebuck & Son, Inc. for the splendid extra effort extended to this publication.

Let it stand as another example of a Roebuck Job well done.

During their stay at Loyola, students scarcely ever have the time or desire to express their feelings of nostalgia. Nostalgia feeds on memory, and college students in their preparation for the future do not give an important role to memory. Since it is to the future and to the new that college students look, it is to the new and contemporary that this EVERGREEN was dedicated.

However, as age creeps up on men, their concern for the future is lessened, and the past assumes an increasing importance in their lives. Thus it is to memory and to nostalgia that men repair. If then, this yearbook has served as a stimulus to pleasant remembrance and nostalgia, it has performed what is, perhaps, its most important function and made its only truly lasting contribution.
